An exciting collaboration between winemaker Sean McKenzie and musician Dave Matthews, The Dreaming Tree captures the spirit of California’s wine country. United by their shared passion to make quality wines accessible to everyone, the two friends set out on a journey to discover the unique characters and rich flavors that give the region its rare charm.

2018 Vintage
After a warm, dry winter, we had some great spring rains that helped slow down the start of the 2018 growing season for our vines. We had an unusually mild summer with no high heat periods through the late summer and fall harvest. This exceptionally mild weather brought a larger than average crop. When combined with no-picking pressure, it made for one of the longest harvests in recent years. The result was great quality grapes with amazing acid and fruit balance in all varieties.

Winemaking
Harvested at night, a portion of the grapes went direct to press, with another portion getting some skin contact to develop more pink color. The resulting juice went through a cool, slow fermentation process in 100% stainless steel tanks with some very aromatically expressive yeast strains. After, bottling came quickly to maintain the youthful characteristics of the fruit.

Tasting Notes
This dry California Rosé is a soft, pale pink in color with delicate floral and tropical aromas. Crisp and light in body with fresh, fruity flavors of watermelon, strawberry, and nectarine.

Food Pairing
A great sipping wine that pairs well with grilled chicken salad, bruschetta, asparagus salad, and mixed berry fruit tarts.

Sustainability
The environment is important to us, and we’re pretty sure you feel the same. From the day we pick the grapes to the night you pop the cork, we’re making changes that add up along the way.
